Profile

This project involved the full refurbishment and restoration of a terraced house located in a conservation area in Tower Hamlets. The project included a part single, part two-storey rear extension and a new mansard roof that replaced the original butterfly roof. Traditional detailing combined with contemporary components resulted in a harmonious juxtaposition. Vaulted ceilings were introduced under the pitched roofs, which, combined with new skylights, created light and airy rooms.

The new elements reflect the original roof geometry and slim-module bricks give a nod to the traditional finish. A thoughtful placement of glazing into the external envelope results in a play of light, whilst maintaining privacy. The internal finishes combine concrete effect tiles and cherry plywood, with brass and orange accents, giving the rooms a sense of tranquillity and warmth.
